

Area of Internationalization and International Relations

In the area of internationalization and the development of international relations, we consider it essential to maintain and develop the international position of the faculty; expand opportunities for bilateral cooperation with other significant educational and research institutions both domestically and abroad; initiate and intensify student exchange programs within bilateral cooperation, and support the realization of study mobilities and internships at partner institutions; support staff in pedagogical and professional mobilities; and gradually create and provide suitable conditions for the internationalization of education at all levels. An essential element for internationalizing the faculty is creating and offering study programs in foreign languages. The faculty intends to further strengthen its position in international relations and cooperation. Key priorities in this area include:

- Ensure functionality of agreements with international partner institutions;
- Support the provision of study programs in foreign languages;
- Increase the number of courses offered in foreign languages;
- Support, motivate, and intensify student and staff mobility;
- Support staff in creating international research teams and participating in international research, educational, and development projects;
- Support foreign language education to facilitate successful internationalization of studies and their integration with research and study areas.
